

SCOTTIE

As several folks have pointed out to me, Scottie McC is getting chatty:

The most powerful leader in the world had called upon me to speak on his behalf and help restore credibility he lost amid the failure to find weapons of mass destruction in Iraq. So I stood at the White House briefing room podium in front of the glare of the klieg lights for the better part of two weeks and publicly exonerated two of the senior-most aides in the White House: Karl Rove and Scooter Libby.

There was one problem. It was not true.

I had unknowingly passed along false information. And five of the highest ranking officials in the administration were involved in my doing so: Rove, Libby, the vice President, the President's chief of staff, and the president himself. -from What Happened

I'm not really going to hold my breath that this contains any new revelations. But I am intrigued by one thing: the mention of Andy Card, Bush's Chief of Staff. We've known that Bush, Cheney, Libby, and Rove were intimately involved in this gig. But if we can pull Andy Card in—something Ted Wells alluded to during the trial—it might get interesting.

And, just as a reminder, Card and Scottie left the White House within a week of each other—both happening just before Turdblossom's final grand jury appearance.

Again—not holding my breath. Just saying.
