

HOW COULD IT POSSIBLY BE PART OF KARL ROVE'S "OFFICIAL DUTIES" TO HIJACK DOJ?

The biggest two regrets I have about Netroots Nation is that I arrived too late to meet either Governor Siegelman or Richard Clarke.

But I did manage to get the folks at Brave New Films to pose the question I've been asking for over a week to Governor Siegelman: How can Fred Fielding claim that the actions about which the House Judiciary Committee subpoenaed Karl Rove to testify were related to his "official duties"?

Governor Siegelman is just as mystified by the question as I am:

How could it possibly be part of Karl Rove's official duties to hijack the Department of Justice and use it as a political tool to prosecute those people whom they don't like or people whom they think are political opponents?

Karl Rove was involved in the allocation of resources to the Department of Justice and there is a question, certainly a question is raised as to his conduct and the people that he put into place over at the Department of Justice and whether they were programmed to abuse power for political reasons.

Update: Title fixed per skdadl.