

RNC TO AUDIT PALIN'S PANTY DRAWER

And here's my favorite line in the whole NYT Wasilla Wonder piece.

Republican National Committee lawyers were likely to go to Alaska to conduct an inventory and try to account for all that was spent.

Remember, there were allegations that some of Sarah's $150,000 wardrobe was "lost." If they're planning on flying to Alaska to "account for all that was spent," it suggests, first of all, that the loot is in Alaska, not in an upscale thrift store in, say, Phoenix (where the number of people who wear that kind of clothes is higher than it is in Alaska). It suggests that Palin still has it.

And it suggests that the RNC is skeptical they're going to be able to find all of Palin's new clothes.