

AMY KLOBUCHAR SHREDS COBURN'S "CONCEPT OF FREEDOM"

Senator Coburn spent about 20 straight minutes today whining to Elena Kagan about how much less freedom we have today than we did 30 years ago.

Which Amy Klobuchar promptly shredded—by far the highlight of today's hearing. As she points out, back in Coburn's idyllic free time, women were not represented on the Supreme Court—and barely were in Congress. (Though, note, she corrected herself later—Senator Kassebaum was serving in the Senate already by 1980.)

But then what would you expect from one of the C Street boys, huh?