

BOB GRAHAM SAYS FBI AGGRESSIVELY DECEIVED ON SARASOTA 9/11 INVESTIGATION

James Clapper has suggested that the 28 pages of the Joint Congressional Inquiry may be declassified by June. I'm skeptical the pages will be entirely declassified, but look forward to them.

Meanwhile, former Senate Intelligence Chair has begun to press for an accounting on the Sarasota cell of apparent 9/11 supporters. In an interview with NPR, he stated clearly that FBI lied (um, misstated) what they knew about the Sarasota cell and called for the investigations to be reopened without the tight time limits imposed on the original commissions.

I think it's been more than a cover up. I think it's what I call aggressive deception: instances in which the FBI has publicly released statements which I know from personal experience were untrue. They stated that in this Sarasota situation they had completed the investigation, that the investigation determined that there were no connections between the hijackers and the prominent Saudi family and that they had turned over all of this information to the Congressional Inquiry and the 9/11 Citizen's [sic] Commission. I know for a fact that none of those three statements are true.

It's more than a cover-up. The FBI misstated what is in their own records relative to the situation in Sarasota.

Of course, the FBI went even further with its aggressive deception on the anthrax attack.

Nevertheless (or perhaps, "as a result"), Robert Mueller will probably have the new FBI headquarters named after him, based on the bogus premise that his FBI didn't engage in some of the same kinds of deceptions as J Edgar Hoover's FBI did.
