

AILEEN CANNON LIBERATES DETAILS OF TRUMP AND MELANIA'S MAR-A-LAGO BEDROOMS

I don't like Trump at all.

I don't like Melania much either.

But call me crazy, I don't think this kind of detail of a former President's private suite should be available to the masses and aspiring spies, not even those of former Presidents accused of stealing hundreds of classified documents.

75. WITNESS █ described FPOTUS's residential suite, referred to as the Owners' Quarters, as accessible via steel sliding doors. The first room is known as Pine Hall, which serves as a sitting room. Pine Hall then accesses a hallway known as French Hall. From within French Hall, there are two available doors. The door to the left leads to FPOTUS's personal suite, and the door to the right leads to FPOTUS's spouse's personal suite. Those two suites are additionally connected by a door between them. As of approximately June 26, 2022, WITNESS █ was present in FPOTUS's suite for maintenance purposes, but did not recall observing boxes in that location. On June 30, 2022, WITNESS █ informed the FBI, via legal counsel representing WITNESS █, that the dimensions of FPOTUS's personal suite are approximately 16 feet by 28 feet, and the dimensions of FPOTUS's spouse's personal suite are approximately 20 feet by 28 feet. WITNESS █'s legal counsel confirmed that WITNESS █ may not have been able to fully observe the entirety of the FPOTUS's personal suite on June 26, 2022.

Ah well, kudos to Melania, who got an extra 112 square feet in the bargain.

A more pertinent part of newly unredacted material in the August 2022 search warrant affidavit is that DOJ asked for CCTV footage from outside of Pine Hall, as well as the hallway outside the storage closet where Trump had all his stolen documents stashed, as I've long surmised. If such video exists, they didn't get it in their first request (there remains a redaction regarding the response they did get).

Update: According to NPR, Judge Cannon has some disclosure issues of her own, having failed to disclose two junkets she took to Montana.

Judge Aileen Cannon of the Southern District of Florida is presiding over former President Donald Trump's criminal trial for allegedly mishandling classified documents. Cannon, herself a Trump appointee, attended two seminars at a luxury resort in Montana, but the privately funded seminar disclosures for both events were not posted online until NPR began making inquiries. Clerk of court Angela Noble told NPR in an email that the absence of the disclosures was due to technical issues and that "Any omissions to the website are completely inadvertent."
