

THE CONTEXT OF VESELNITSKAYA'S "INFORMANT" COMMENT

The big takeaway from Richard Engel's interview of Natalia Veselnitskaya – that she admitted to being an "informant" to Russia's prosecutor general – is not as interesting as her admission that she worked for an entity with some ties to FSB. And neither is the smoking gun on Russian involvement in the Trump Tower meeting.