

IF AN INFORMANT NARCS ON A RIOT BUT NO FBI AGENT ASKS ABOUT IT, DID IT REALLY HAPPEN?

In spite of the fact that the FBI got key warnings about Stewart Rhodes and Enrique Tarrio that never got shared with FBI's Washington Field Office, in spite of the fact that the FBI had 26 informants on site but only asked three for information, the FBI contested DOJ Inspector General's critique that it should have done more to work its informants in advance of the attack.
