

WAPO SHOULD GO TO COLUMBUS TO FIND OUT HOW ECONOMY WILL REOPEN, NOT PERPETUATE TRUMP'S MYTHS ABOUT IT

WaPo seems either thinks it's really important to tell their readers how the country will reopen or they've been snookered by the White House in perpetuating a myth that that process will be led by the White House. If it's the latter, that strand of reporting (which is separate from a great deal of good WaPo journalism on how Trump fucked up) is just as negligent as Trump's own actions are, because such stories misinform about how this will work. If it's the former, then WaPo would do well to send some journalists to work in Columbus, Annapolis, and Boston full time, or better yet, bring on some laid off reporters who know how those state houses really work.
