

WHAT'S IT TAKE FOR HOLDER TO BE ALLOWED TO DO A SUNDAY SHOW? KILL MIRANDA!

The White House press made a bit of a todo over the fact that Eric Holder was finally allowed to go on a Sunday show today (he's appearing on both ABC and NBC). Given all the somewhat bizarre claims from people like Rahm that Holder botches his public statements, it sort of makes you wonder what he'd have to agree to before he'd be allowed out without a minder.

The answer?

Kill Miranda!

Even in his appearance on ABC, Holder makes a case that Miranda has not impeded any investigation to date:

The system has proven to be effective. ... people have been given Miranda warnings, people have continued to talk, as was the case [with Faisal Shahzad], as was the case with Abdulmutallab in Detroit.

And Holder has made even more passionate defenses of Miranda in the past, notably in Congressional testimony (see some quotes from such testimony here). Nevertheless, Holder effectively uses his Sunday show debut to say, "If it ain't broke, but fearmongers like Joe Lieberman and Lindsey Graham want to attack it nevertheless, then hell! Let's break it!"

But gosh. It sure is nice to see the last defender of rule of law allowed to appear on the Sunday shows!
