

CABLES ON CHURCH SEX SCANDAL AMONG THOSE SENT TO WIKILEAKS

Threat Level posted a quarter of the chat logs between alleged Wikileaks leaker Bradley Manning and hacker Adrian Lamo (it didn't post those with particularly personal or potentially dangerous national security information).

While the logs don't provide many details about what was in the 260,000 State Department cables that has the government so spooked, they do reveal that some of the cables pertain to the Vatican's position on the Church's sex scandals.

(1:45:16 PM) Manning: hundreds of them

(1:45:40 PM) Lamo: like what? I'm genuinely curious about details.

(1:46:01 PM) Manning: i dont know... theres so many... i dont have the original material anymore

(1:46:18 PM) Manning: uhmm... the Holy See and its position on the Vatican sex scandals

(1:46:26 PM) Lamo: play it by ear

(1:46:29 PM) Manning: the broiling one in Germany

Sort of makes you wonder why the State Department is discussing what the Vatican thinks about its pedophile priests, doesn't it? Unless of course our government is tapping the Pope to keep tracks on the Church's pedophiles...